To Algernon Charles Swinburne 1837-1909

[Bristol] Congratulates him on the beauty of the new metre [quarta rime] which he has developed [in "Memorial Verses on the Death of Theophile Gautier."] It seems to him to bear the same realtion to terza rima as the double roses of Paestum do to the single rose on the coin of Rhodes. To one who knows the work of Gautier, the critical value of his poem is as great as its imaginative force.

Gay, Sydney Howard, 1814-1888.

Letter to Richard D. Webb; [n.p.], 10 December 1849.

Appreciation of his letters; has given Mr Roy a letter of introduction to him, though not a personal friend; interest in Joseph Barker through Webb's mention of him; his own respect for him though they do not get along; bad influence of the Griffins; sent copy of Jay's Mexican War; his estimation of Wright.

Typewritten, even to signature; probably copy.

«Written from?» The writer heard that Rev. James Miller McKim was annoyed by the writer's statement that the Pennsylvania Society had contributed nothing in the past year. Contends that his statement is correct, and is unable to understand why it requires explanation. The Pennsylvania Society pays to the American Anti-Slavery Society only the money it receives for subscriptions to the Anti-Slavery Standard.

To "Chère Madame" (Mrs. Maria Weston Chapman?)

, ? , The writer thanks the addressee for introducing the Abolitionist cause to her and France. Wants to introduce M. Eugene Cordier to the addressee. Thinks that possibly Cordier might influence Kossuth to join the Abolitionists? (Meaning not clear) Hopes she has not been indiscreet in seeking to introduce M. Cordier to the addressee.

[Elmira, N.Y.] The kindness shown Gerhardt by "Mr. and Mrs. Jesse" prove they are true Grants. Hopes he will make a bust of the child that will satisfy the mother; it ought then to satisfy the father, and will satisfy the rest of the world. He cannot help making a noble statue of the General, even though he has had only occasional glimpses.

To Karl Gerhardt, 1853-<1904

«Elmira» Scolds him for frittering away a busy man's time wit with his flighty notions. Gerhardt had asked Clemens to send him a letter, or write in his behalf. After the letters were done, his own answer was published by the Associated Press. Gerhardt also blundered in his dealings with Mrs. Grant. Even if Congress, following her suggestion, decides to order a statue of Grant, Gerhardt has no assurance that the award will go to him.

«To Ellis Gray Loring»

«New York» The writer, having read her husband's (James S. Gibbons's) letter, finds it too tame. Being sensitive where her father (Isaac T. Hopper) is concerned, when a reduction of his salary was proposed, she thought "that it would have been well if a spirit of economy had so far prevailed last year as to have withheld J.A.Collins who was the means of bringing the Society in debt pretty extensively." The writer states:"we are unanimous and decided that we have no right to remove the Executive Committee from New York or its Books." Believes that it was understood that the quorum in Boston were to be considered as a[illegible]ors. The writer's husband is for the moment "spirit cr[illegible]." Thre three office agents chosen by distant friends [illegible] all proved unsatisfactory. A.L.S. 4 p. 8 1/8 x 5 3/8 in.

"Our object was so direct, that we did not dream of the inference & implications that have been drawn from it." The writer wants to see the addressee on his brief visit to Boston. "You have more agitation than the Standard — more fire-rocketting. Your thunder bolts are in the rough cast[illegible] — [Lydia] Maria [Child]'s are polished — but I grant [illegible] that Jupiter hurls both."

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman No.51

«New York» Acknowledges letters received; the official reply has to be postponed till after a meeting of the New York committee. The writer replies that he never supposed his efforts to have been depreciated. "Who does less than duty is a knave - & no one can do more. That we have done less, I know, & therefore we are knaves - not exactly so - that is, not in the Lewis Tappan sense ..." The writer is "selfishly glad" to be relieved of burdens "which can be better borne by you," but his judgment is unchanged in regard to the locality of the central committee.

«New York» The writer expresses the state of mind of the New York Executive Committee of the American Anti-Slavery Society as "under a sense of dispiritment." A quorum of the committee resident in Boston was appointed to act coordinately with the central portion in New York. Now "the Society is essentially removed to Boston - an express violation of our Constitution... Our Comittee encounter these difficulties: We have the responsibility of our office - but our Boston friends proceed to appoint an office agent with whom we have no acquaintance, without consulting us." In the mean time the New York committee has been negotiating with someone else. The Boston members publish an [illegible]ant document, before the Expresses his gratitude for the addressee's consideration in discouraging reference to the correction. "It is obvious to ourselves that we are misapprehended on almost every point of the 'correction,' both in language & purpose." The writer agrees with the addressee on the general uselessness of disclaimers, but thinks that a rule on this point would tend "to involve a want of just condescension to the weakness or ignorance of others." The writer plays on the words "moral incendiarism" and tells of cases of actua[illegible]ires in his neighborhood. «New York» The demand for Anti-Slavery books has been "very trifling, compared with the period before the division." The New York Executive Committee proposes that the addressee furnish books that can be spared from the Boston shelves. Replying to the addressee's request for the New York Committee's book of records, the writer says: "The Constitution of the Society provides that the Ex Comee (Executive Committee) shall be located in New York. If its record book, & the date of its official action be in Boston, the centrality of the society will in effect be removed there, which will expressly transcend the Constitution." The Committee is ready to hear the other side.

«New York» The New York members of the committee explain their position. "They did not understand that the design of the Society was to place the business in the hands of the Boston friends independently of those in New York..." They now resign "the entire management of its business," and wish to assist the Boston committee by advice, but "must decline any official interference or responsibility." They desire that their position be published to the Abolitionists throughout the country. In their opinion the transfer is contrary to the constitution of the Society.

No.109

[Fitchburg, Mass.] The writer learned from the report of the October Anti-Slavery fair that her society had failed to send its contribution of merchandise in time for it to be sold at the fair. "Unitarianism, priest and people, male and female, with the exception of one or two women, stands entire aloof from our cause." Says E. W. Bullard, the Calvinist minister, is so opposed to Abolitionism that even C. T. Torrey was unable to win him over. The New Organization has hampered the writer's efforts considerably. Says that Mr. Smith, the Baptist minister is more favorably inclined toward the Anti-Slavery cause. He, Mr. Gill, [illegible] writer and others want Garrison to come to Fitchburg t[illegible]ture. Would like to have a letter from the addressee. [illegible] their [sic] any hope of the Boston Female Society? ... If you know of any signs of rep-

«Fitchburg, Mass.» The writer tried first to send the contributions of her society to the addressee's fair, then to the Lynn Anti-Slavery fair, but was prevented from so doing by the Board of Managers of her society, so she now asks the addressee to give them to the Asylum for Coloured Children. [Fitchburg, Mass.] The writer has sympathized with the addressee in the recent trials. "These movements have made husband and myself more thorough garrisonites than ever." Ministerial influence in Fitchburg is against reforms. That the writer's "very dear brother, J[ohn] E. Fuller should join the crusade against Garrison, is painful." The writer feels almost safe in pledging her (anti-slavery) society to the Massachusetts interests. Soon after the rupture occasioned by the Fitchburg Resolutions the society voted to take $12 worth of the Liberator and to send an expression of sympathy for its editor. Many friends wish Garrison [illegible] Wendell Phillips to lecture at Fitchburg.
